INTRODUCTION

AT the beginning of the XVIIIth century all Freemasons professed belief in the Christian Trinity as a matter of course, but the Constitutions of 1723 and 1738 opened the doors to "all good Men and true" irrespective of their religious persuasion, with the sole exception of atheists This affected Roman Catholics and Protestants alike, but the lodge ballot boxes provided an adequate remedy The Papal Bull, "In Eminenti Apostolatus Specula" of 1738 excommunicated all freemasons and any who aided them after its promulgation and registration with the Civil Authorities in the various dioceses This produced an immediate reaction, and by about 1740 a number of degrees with a Christian background appeared in France and gradually spread over Europe

The most important of these were a masonic Templar Rite and a Rose Croix Degree, neither of which has any historical or ritual connection with the old Military Orders or with the mediæval Rosicrucians

It is not known how, or precisely when, the Templar-Malta Rite reached the British Isles, but traces of it are found in the 1760s and the wide variety of the ritual forms extant by the end of the century suggests that they came from different sources In all cases the degrees appear to have been adopted by Royal Arch Chapters and, at first, worked by them under their existing Warrants

After the failure of an attempt by the Baldwyn Encampment at Bristol to organize matters on a national basis an approach was made to Thomas Dunckerley, who received sufficient support throughout the country to form a Grand Encampment In 1791 he presided over the first meeting of the Grand Conclave composed of seven independent Encampments. From innate conservatism, doubts as to the effect of the Secret Societies Act, 1799, and various other factors, it was some years before the movement received general acceptance.

During the Grand Mastership of the Duke of Sussex (1812-1843) there was for a time a strong section in the United Grand Lodge bitterly opposed to all masonic activity outside the Craft and Royal Arch, in spite of the grudging toleration of the "Degrees of the Orders of Chivalry" inserted in Article II of the Act of Union of the Grand Lodges, and to avoid adding fuel to the fire, the Duke ceased to summon the Grand Conclave, which at that time was the warranting authority, but he instructed his headquarters to grant dispensations to meet and install Knights, pending the issue of formal warrants

By the 1830s tension had eased and the Duke, under his own signature and without reference to the Grand Conclave, warranted a few Encampments and erected a Province for Dorset After his death in 1843 the position had so far improved that the Duke's Deputy, John Christian Burckhardt, was able to resume Grand Conclave meetings, Col C K Kemeys Tynte was installed as Grand Master, and normal conditions were restored, except that the grant of warrants remained in the sole discretion of the Grand Master

When Dunckerely took control of the Rite he did not interfere with the form of ritual worked by the individual Encampments, but in the 1850's it was felt desirable to introduce a measure of uniformity All the old workings were studied, and the present-day Templar ritual was built around the core of one dating from the XVIIIth century

A few years later the same was done for the Mediterranean Pass (Knight of St Paul) and Malta degrees

In the 1870s a serious attempt was made to extend this principle to embrace England and Wales, Scotland, and Ireland under a Convent General, with domestic control reserved to each country but a ritual common to all Only England and Ireland put this into effect, for Scotland retired at an early stage of the negotiations The changes aroused opposition throughout the English Jurisdiction and the plan had to be modified But, in spite of the subsequent adhesion of the Sovereign Great Priory of Canada, Convent General tottered to an unlamented death in 1896, when each country reverted to complete independence, in respect of both administration and ritual.

Preliminary Directions

The apartment represents a Chapel of the Order. In the East is placed an Altar on which are·—a Bible, a Cross, two lighted Candles and an Alms Dish. The Sepulchre is in the centre of the Chapel (see plan opposite)

In the West is placed a table on which is provided Bread and Water.

The Eminent Preceptor's Chair is in the N E on the North side of the Altar A small pedestal must be provided for the use of the E P

The Chaplain is stationed in the S E on the South side of the Altar In most cases, when the Chaplain offers prayer, he stands in the middle of the Altar, facing East, and removes his headdress. after "A — Men" has been said or sung, he replaces his headdress and resumes his place the exception to this is the Benediction given at the end of Closing the Preceptory

The First and Second Constables are stationed in the S W and N.W respectively, with the Marshal between them, who has the Deputy Marshal on his left

It is desirable that the Marshal should be a Past Preceptor.

The Marshal draws and returns his sword on all occasions when the Knights are called "To Order" or told to "Be seated", except where stated· on most occasions he sets the time for the other Knights for these Drills

Whenever possible the Candidate should be on the Marshal's left.

The Rubrics of this Ritual are framed for a Preceptory in which a Deputy Marshal has been appointed

Where no Deputy Marshal is appointed, the Marshal will be assisted by the 1st Herald

The Deputy Marshal may, if it is desired, take charge of the Candidate when there is only one, in which case he will be assisted by the 1st Herald M then directs the movements of the Knights, Arch of Steel, Salutes, etc , as laid down in the Ritual

The Captain of Guards is stationed within the entrance of the Chapel He draws his sword when the Knights are first called "To Order" He keeps it drawn until the Knights "Return Swords" after the Preceptory has been closed When the Knights are called "To Order" he stands with his sword at the "Carry" When the Knights are seated, he sits "at ease", i e , with blade of his sword resting on his right shoulder, the right hand holding the hilt of the sword, being crossed over the left, in front of him

Collection of Alms

Immediately prior to the collection of Alms M calls the Knights to rise they do not draw swords The Templar Hymn may be sung during the collection

Towards the end of the collection the Chaplain moves in front of the Altar and stands facing West When the

Almoner or other Knight making the collection has completed, he stands in front of the Chaplain facing East he hands the Alms to the Chaplain, who turns right-about he offers the Alms at the Altar, turns right-about again and hands the Alms back to the Knight who had collected them he places them on the Treasurer's table and returns to his place, the Chaplain returns to his place

The M instructs the Knights to be seated

All propositions should then be dealt with prior to formally closing the Preceptory

Guarding the Sepulchre

The minimum number of Knights to guard the Sepulchre is four (one on each side) eight Knights provide a more impressive guard (three each on the North and South sides and one each on the East and West) It is desirable for the Marshal to nominate the Knights and rehearse this movement before the

Preceptory is opened

Where the Knights of the Arch of Steel guard the S. the drill is given on pages 57 and 58.

NOTE

All crosses, stars and jewels, except those worn around the neck, are to be worn on the left breast of the tunic and not on the ribbon, nor on the red cross on the tunic.

The Cross should be nearer to the centre, the Malta Jewel next to it and in line with it, and the Star should be just below them

The challenge is made in each case by a downward sweep of the sword, as if to strike at the head of the Novice· this is parried by the Novice holding his sword horizontally above his head with the right hand· when the blow is parried the two swords form a cross

The Novice, accompanied by the Marshal, proceeds round the Preceptory and is stopped and challenged, in the first round by a P P in the S.E , in the second round by the 1st Con in the S W, and in the third round by the 2nd Con in the N.W

CHARGE

E P (or Past Preceptor)—Worthy Brother, now a Novice of our Order, the ceremonies in which you are engaged are calculated to impress your mind deeply and, I trust, will have a lasting influence upon your future character You were first, as a trial of your faith and humility, enjoined to perform a seven years' pilgrimage, it represented the pilgrimage of life, through which we are all passing, we are all weary pilgrims, advancing towards that haven where we shall cease from our labours and be at rest for ever You were then, as a trial of your courage and constancy, directed to perform seven years of warfare This represented to you the constant warfare with the lying vanities and deceits of this world, in which it is necessary for us always to be engaged You are now about to perform a year of penance, as a further trial of your humility and of that faith which will conduct you safely over the dark gulf of death and land your enfranchised spirit in the peaceful abodes of the blessed

Let the emblem of life and death which lie before you remind you of the uncertainty of our earthly existence and teach you to be prepared for the closing hour of your mortal life; and rest assured that a firm faith in the truths revealed to us will afford you consolation in the gloomy hours of dissolution and ensure your ineffable and eternal happiness in the world to come

The Mar instructs the Novice to proceed slowly by himself once round the Preceptory, and return to his position facing the E P A solemn dirge may be played during the Penance

E P —You will now repeat after me May the spirit which once inhabited this s l rise up and testify against me, if ever I wilfully violate my obligation as a Knight Templar, and may my light be extinguished among men as was that of Judas Iscariot for betraying his Lord and Master and as I now extinguish this light

The Novice does so The Marshal takes and replaces on the S. first the unlighted taper and then the s l sake Whether it be the king, as supreme, or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evil-doers, and for the praise of them that do well. 2nd Herald, in the N W —Long life, honour and prosperity to our Most Eminent and Supreme Grand Master, the Great Officers and all other Knights of our Order, and I call upon you to salute our newly installed Knight . , taking the time from the Marshal

When all is ready, Mar directs new Knight to rise, Dep Mar replaces chair and sits The Mar conducts the new Knight to North-West corner of Sep , where he stands

E P rises and moves to North-East corner of the Sep The Mar returns to his station, returns his sword and sits

E P— I shall now explain to you the symbols of the Order The three Great Lights placed at the angles of the equilateral triangle represent the three favourite apostles of our Saviour, namely Peter, James and John, of whom the last named was the most beloved, for, leaning on our Saviour's bosom, he received those instructions which he communicated so faithfully to the other disciples The nine Smaller Lights, distributed equally among those already noticed, are emblematical of the nine other Apostles, of whom one, represented by the taper extinguished by you, betrayed his Lord and Master. You will now re-light and replace the taper

The new Knight does so by lighting the candle from the candle in the North-West

Chaplain, advances to the S.E corner of S and (only if in Holy Orders with right hand raised) recites

So may our Saviour lift up the light of His reconciled countenance upon you and keep you from falling

Chaplain returns to his seat

E P—The skull and cross-bones, the emblems of mortality, are placed at the foot of the Cross, these collectively remind us of the place called in the Hebrew Golgotha, unto which Simon of Cyrene was constrained to bear the Cross on which our Saviour was crucified The skull also reminds us of the fate of one Simon of Syracuse, who was admitted into our illustrious Order, but violated his obligation by betraying his trust to the Infidels They, although they profited by the treason, despised the traitor and caused his head to be struck off and sent to the Grand Master of the Knights Templar, who ordered it to be placed on the point of a pinnacle or spire, the skull to be laid open, and the brains exposed to the scorching rays of the sun, as a warning to all others It is in allusion to this circumstance that this sign was formerly given in our ceremony

E P demonstrates sign with th of rh., new Knight copies

The Lamb, the Dove and Cock are sacred symbols of the Order The first is emblematical of the Paschal Lamb, slain from the foundation of the world The Dove is symbolical of the Almighty Comforter, who descended like a Dove on Christ at His baptism, whereby His divine mission was indicated to St John the Baptist The Cock is the monitor of the Order for, as his crowing heralds the morn, so let it at that still hour call to our remembrance our duties as Knights Templar, and remind us thus early to ask for assistance to perform them throughout the coming day May we ever welcome that sound as a friendly caution and not have reason to fear it as the periodical reminder of a broken vow

Marshal rises, draws his sword and conducts the new Knight to the East, where the E P shows the Warrant and gives him a copy of the Statutes and the By-laws of the Preceptory

The new Knight is then conducted to a seat in the North West of the Preceptory, either behind or on the East of the North Column of the Arch of Steel Mar. returns to his station, returns his sword and sits Investiture of an Officer.

During the investiture of Officers in a Preceptory, the following is the procedure to be used —

When his name is called out, the Knight will rise in his place, draw his Sword and come to the "Carry" He is conducted by the Marshal to the E P, where he halts, and —

1 Turns his Sword over (via the left), point towards the ground

4 Stands before the E P and presents to him the hilt of the Sword, resting the blade (near the hilt) on his left forearm

5 Grasps the hilt of the Sword with his Right hand, and brings it to the "Carry"

6 Salutes the E P. with the S of Crus.

7. Is conducted to his place by the Marshal, where he returns his Sword and takes his seat.

Capt. of Guards keeps his Sword drawn.

The same procedure will be used in Great Priory for the investiture of a Great Officer, or in a Provincial Priory for the investiture of a Provincial Officer.
